Wonders & Worries Launches Registered Provider Program

Austin, TX – October 29, 2019 – Wonders & Worries has announced the immediate launch of the Registered Wonders & Worries Provider program (RWWP). The RWWP offers child life specialists and other clinicians the opportunity to enhance their practice offering using an intervention method that has been clinically proven to be effective.

Wonders & Worries offer two levels of engagement for this program: Individual Credential Level and Organizational Affiliate Level. The Individual Credential Level is applicable to both certified child life specialists and other mental health practitioners. The Organizational Affiliate Level is for medical institutions interested in procuring a Wonders & Worries site license.

A partnership with Wonders & Worries not only allows access to its current leading-edge curriculum and materials, but also provides access to support from its program team, both in group format as well as in the form of an individual consultation. In addition, registered organizations benefit from ongoing significant investments in curriculum development, clinical research, product development and branding – all included in the registration fees.

“Partnering with Wonders & Worries is a unique opportunity because our model of support is the only formal curriculum-based intervention that has been validated by a randomized clinical trial”, said Kim Fryar, program director.

“The implications of the RWWP are exciting,” said Alex Gabbi, executive director. “We are looking forward to our curriculum being adopted by providers everywhere to the benefit of children and families in need in their patient communities.”
